Press Release

Face masks fly off shelves in preparation for flu season

Online merchant, Nukepills.com, boosts inventory to keep up with demand

Mooresville, NC - September 23, 2009 - Nukepills.com today announced the replenishment of its stock of N95 Particulate Masks just in time for the upcoming flu season. A deluge of online orders in May of this year, in response to media stories of the Swine Flu Virus (H1N1), depleted the company's large inventory in just a few days.

"We had run out of stock of N95 face masks back in May. We were surprised by the rush of orders that literally happened overnight.", said Troy Jones, president of Nukepills.com. "We have just now received a huge shipment of fresh N95 face masks to cover our wholesale and retail business for the remainder of the flu season. Aside from frequent hand washing, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention [CDC] is recommending the use of certain types of face masks if you are in close contact with someone who has, or may have, the swine flu. We only stock N95 masks that are both NIOSH and FDA approved. Anything less would not give our customers the protection they demand."

N95 face masks available from Nukepills.com are individually sealed to maintain freshness and integrity of the product and fold flat for easy storage and portability. They are also approved by the FDA for use as surgical masks.

Nukepills.com, celebrating its 10th year in business, is an Internet-based supplier of, primarily, radiation emergency products that protect against dirty bomb radiation, nuclear reactor accidents and nuclear weapon fallout, and are used for radiation therapy/decontamination in hospitals. The company was founded in 1999 as a means of supplying FDA approved Iosat Potassium Iodide directly to the general public and now has international sales programs throughout Canada, Europe, Asia and the Middle East. In early 2009, Nukepills.com sold 5.4 million doses of FDA approved ThyroShield™ Liquid Potassium Iodide to Kuwait's Ministry of Health and expects Government Emergency Preparedness grants and civilian orders to continue to drive sales of all products well into 2010.
